

David Meredith, Facilitator

Mr. Meredith has over 35 years of experience in the federal government sector – at the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and in the Department of Defense (at a predecessor agency to the National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency), with over 25 years as a supervisor/manager. Mr. Meredith has strong traditional management skills, highly developed emotional intelligence, and a passion to promote human professional development through leadership development and mentoring. He has a strong servant leadership style and was a prolific mentor and coach of staff and managers throughout the EPA, in both formal and informal contexts, over the previous 12 years, while serving as a manager in EPA’s enforcement and compliance assurance program.

Experience

Mr. Meredith has a wide variety of experiences and accomplishments as a staff, senior staff, team leader, special assistant, supervisor, manager, and senior advisor during the last four decades of work for the U.S. government. He has benefitted from a tremendous amount of relevant internally funded or provided training programs as well as from his own reading on subjects that relate to his ability to effectively manage in the highly diverse human resource environment of the federal government. Upon Mr. Meredith’s recent retirement from federal services, he is strongly committed to devoting a portion of his time to assisting younger professionals develop ever closer to the leaders that they aspire to become.

Education

Mr. Meredith received his Bachelor of Science in Geography with minors in Mathematics/Statistics and Music from the University of Maryland. He completed extensive continuing education classes in information technology and database management early in his career as he managed systems with all the military mapping requirements, and later, all the satellite imagery collected by the U.S. globally for mapping purposes.

Accomplishments

Mr. Meredith has been awarded for work including: strategic mission plans, vision statements, goals and measure development; creation of new information/data standards; creation of a comprehensive program performance review process for EPA HQ to use with their 10 regional offices; creation of unique marketing/promotional materials for environmentally beneficial projects resulting from enforcement action settlements; envisioning and implementing an organizational restructuring; a sustained commitment to the EPA’s formal mentoring/coaching program, in which he mentored/coached 18 individuals; leadership over complex business process re-engineering and system modernization projects.

In his personal time, Mr. Meredith focuses a good portion of his free time, beyond his parenting responsibilities, on building community while coaching 21 seasons of youth sports, and leading over 400 open community musical jam sessions over 16 years in Garrett Park, MD. In the latter role, he led groups of musicians in close to 100 performances in a wide variety of contexts. David has been nominated for several Coach of the Year Awards and for an Arts & Humanities Award in Montgomery County, MD for his successful community building efforts through music.
